VOL. XXX.

HOPKINSVILLE, KENTUCKY, SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1908.

No. 77.

FORMER PRESIDENT BURIED FRIDAY.

Laid to Rest in the Cemetery at Princeton, New Jersey.

DEATH MASK TAKEN.

Imposing Ceremonies and Distinguished Honors Show by Nation.

Princeton, N. J., June 26.—At five o'clock this afternoon, the body of Princeton's distinguished citizen Grover Cleveland was lowered into the grave in the family plot in old Princeton's cemetery, where lies the body of Ruth, the first born of the Cleveland children.

Mrs. Cleveland is bearing her grief with the utmost fortitude and directed the details of the funeral.

Mr. Cleveland's body was buried in a heavy oaken casket with silver handle bars. A silver plate bears this simple inscription: "Grover Cleveland, March 18, 1837—June 24, 1908."

The death mask of the former President was taken. Soon after death had occurred, Mrs. Cleveland sent for Edwin Wilson, a sculptor connected with Princeton University, and requested him to take the mask. The Princeton cemetery is located in a pretty section of the town close to the university buildings, and about a half mile from the Cleveland home. Many of the honored dead of Princeton University are buried there, and the burial grounds are known to the graduates and under-graduates of the university as the Westminster Abbey of America.

BRYAN ON CLEVELAND.

Nebraskan Pays Touching Tribute to Cleveland.

Lincoln, Neb., June 25.—The following tribute to former President Grover Cleveland was written last evening by W. J. Bryan:

"The death of ex-President Grover Cleveland brings to a sudden end the phenomenal career of one of the strongest characters known to the political world during the present generation. Like every commanding figure, he had zealous supporters and earnest opponents, but those who differed from him were as ready as his warmest friends to concede to him the possession of elements of leadership to an extraordinary degree. He was deliberate in action, firm in conviction, and ever ready to accept responsibility for what he did. Few men have exerted a more positive influence on those associated with them. We are not far enough from the period in which his work was done to measure accurately his place in history, but the qualities which made him great are a part of the nation's heritage, and universal sorrow is felt at his death."

CRUMBAUGH IS REMOVED

Loses His Position at Cincinnati, Under Serious Charge.

SERVED TEN YEARS.

Was Appointed From This City By President McKinley.

Washington, D. C., June 26.—By the order of the President, Major S. R. Crumbaugh, supervising inspector of steam vessels in the Cincinnati district, has been removed. It was charged that he violated the civil service rules. Major Crumbaugh was a popular official and was one of the oldest men in the service.

Major Crumbaugh was at one time collector of internal revenue for his district. He became involved in a wrangle with some of his subordinates and it finally resulted in the appointment of Ed. Farley, of Paducah to the position of collector.

Maj. Crumbaugh's former home was Hopkinsville. He is a man of considerable vanity. He was removed from the collectorship at Owensboro in 1883. In Hopkinsville he was at the head of an educational institution. His military was that of an important military personage. About ten years ago he was appointed supervising inspector at Cincinnati by President McKinley, which position he held until removed by President Roosevelt.

BIG FISH.

Two Six-Pound Trout Among String.

Charlie McPherson caught two trout in a pond not far from church Hill Thursday which weighed six pounds each. They were the finest specimens landed this season and were caught with hook and line. Besides the mammoth trout he also caught a good string of smaller fish.

Stuck On Hopkinsville.

Roy Moorman in the Breckinridge Democrat says: Mr. and Mrs. Tom Underwood and Mayor Chas. M. Meacham have a way of making a fellow feel like the whole town belongs to him. All the boys would have been glad to remain in Hopkinsville had it been possible.

We doff our hat to Hopkinsville, the beautiful city where genuine, old-fashioned Kentucky hospitality reigns throughout the year. Hop-town! you have won our heart. Our greatest desire is that we may again enjoy a visit to you like the one of last week.

Madisonville Gets Raise.

After July 1 the postoffices at Ashland and Madisonville, Ky., will each be allowed an additional clerk, under an order issued by the department Thursday. The postoffices at Evansville and French Lick, Ind., will also be allowed each an additional clerk on the same date.

WHOLESALE PARDON LIST

Gov. Cox Lets Out Ten Convicts in One Bunch in State Penitentiary.

ALL ILL AND CRIPPLED.

Only One of Them Was in the Penitentiary for a Life Term.

Frankfort, Ky., June 26.—Acting Gov. Cox pardoned ten convicts as a result of a recent visit to the penitentiary. Nine are crippled or blind. This is the largest number of convicts pardoned at one time in the last thirty years, or since Gov. Blackburn turned loose 150 at one time. The pardons were granted at the instance of Col. E. E. Mudd, the Warden, and Joseph Barr, the prison physician, and Gov. Cox when he made a short talk to the pardoned convicts yesterday afternoon told them that their release was due to kindness of heart of the Warden and the physician.

The Governor is considering the cases of several other convicts who are ill or crippled and probably will issue more pardons.

THE PARDON LIST

The following is a list of the men who were pardoned:

Frank Judy, sent from Clark county in 1907, for four years, on a charge of house-breaking.

Charles H. Slattery, sent from Jefferson county in 1903 for ten years on a charge of house-breaking.

BIG SOCIETY OF EQUITY RALLY FOR JULY 6.

SUIT DISMISSED IN SMITH CASE

The Legal Tangle is Simplified By Judge T. P. Cook.

MAY BE MORE APPEALS

Appellate Court's Recognition of Renshaw Put Him In.

In Circuit Court this week Judge Cook dismissed the suit of David Smith against John M. Renshaw, involving the office of Sheriff of Christian county. Smith had surrendered the office to Renshaw, who became the acting Sheriff and recognized by the decision of the Court of Appeals Tuesday in the writ of prohibition. An appeal was granted and it has not yet been decided whether it will be prosecuted.

Lawyers are not agreed as to whether or not Mr. Smith can appeal to the people to recover his office. He is expected to run for Sheriff if eligible, if not to run for County Judge against Judge Prowse, who removed him.

Circuit Court has adjourned.

PRES. C. M. BARNETT.

Farmers Generally are Urged to Attend the Meeting.

Esq. H. C. Halsey, county chairman, is arranging for a big farmers' meeting July 6.

"A great rally of the Society of Equity will be held at the court house the first Monday in July.

Arrangements have been made to have C. M. Barnett, National President, and J. Campbell Cantrell, of Georgetown, Ky., present and address the people. All local societies are not only invited but urged to turn out and hear these gentlemen. No man can afford to stay away. Justice to himself and those he holds dearest demands that he stop the plow in the furrow and be here to hear things that are for his good. It is the duty of every citizen to take an interest in political affairs, but the paramount duty of the farmer is to help himself and those of the same calling. It is more than the call of citizenship, as self-preservation is a law of nature.

The meeting will be called to order promptly at 10-00 o'clock Monday morning in the Circuit Court room. Farmers and everybody are most cordially invited.

Mr. Barnett and Mr. Cantrell will also address the people at night and explain the plans of the Society of Equity in detail.

SPENT LATTER YEARS IN QUIET EASE AT PRINCETON

Story of the Life Former President Has Led Among His Neighbors and Friends of New Jersey College Town.

Princeton, N. J., June 25.—Grover Cleveland the last ex-President of the United States, for many years has been the most distinguished citizen of this old college town. He entered upon his seventy-second year, on March 18.

While he was not actively engaged in politics for several years, his opinion has been eagerly sought by Democratic politicians and statesmen all over the country and by the newspapers. For a time he was held responsible in many quarters, for the panic of 1893, just as President Roosevelt has been blamed for last year's financial flurry, but this feeling has long since died out.

Mr. Cleveland has steadily turned a deaf ear to all temptations of a return to public office. He has steadfastly taken the position that any American who had been called to the presidency has received the highest honor in the gift of the American people, and that to accept lived twenty-nine years afterward, to die on the same day as Thomas Jefferson—in fact, within one hour, and on a Fourth of July at that.

Jefferson survived twenty-five years after the beginning of his first term. Madison went him two years better, and lived twenty-seven years. John Quincy Adams made a record of twenty-nine years; Martin Van Buren, twenty-five; Tyler, twenty-one, and Fillmore, twenty-four.

It is a significant fact, and one that proves how much greater is the strain of the office now, that since the time of Fillmore, Grover Cleveland is the only man who has lived a score of years after becoming President of the United States. It has now been twenty-three years since Cleveland was first inaugurated. Other Presidents have survived longer than that after taking the oath of office. John Adams was inaugurated in 1797. Pierce lived sixteen; Buchanan, eleven; Johnson, ten; Grant, sixteen; Hayes, sixteen; Arthur, five; Harrison, twelve, and McKinley, four and a half.

His life at Princeton has been simple, quiet and unostentatious. He frequently was seen on the streets, when the weather permitted, in conversation with the town people and college professors. For years it was his custom to enter actively into local politics, but of late years he had withdrawn entirely from this.

Grover Cleveland's wife is charming, and is thoroughly liked wherever she is known. His children were a source of great happiness and pride to Mr. Cleveland. He seldom left Princeton. Being director in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and prominent in the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, he had occasionally to make a business trip to New York and always returned as soon as possible.

Correspondents of the large New York and Philadelphia dailies found it very hard to secure interviews with Mr. Cleveland on public questions. If he had anything to say he telegraphed it over the world in union. The Cleveland home was not pestered by bothersome newspaper men.

His timely suggestion that the ex-Presidents of the United States ought to be pensioned is meeting with universal approval. All realize that he was not doing this from any desire for personal gain, as he was comfortably well off. He desired only to call attention to this for the benefit of future ex-Presidents, as he saw the necessity for such a method in the future.

STATEMENT

Issued By Mr. Cleveland's Physicians.

Princeton, N. J., June 25.—The following statement signed by Drs. Joseph D. Bryant, George R. Lockwood and J. M. Cannonach, was given out immediately after Mr. Cleveland's death.

"Mr. Cleveland for many years had suffered from repeated attacks of gastro-intestinal origin. Also he had long-standing organic disease of the heart and kidneys. Heart failure, complicated with pulmonary thrombosis and oedema, were the immediate cause of his death."

Y. M. C. A. FIELD MEET

Number of Cities Are Expected to Compete.

Henderson, Ky., June 26.—On July 28 the local Young Men's Christian Association will put on a field and track meet at the local fair grounds, in which Owensboro, Evansville, Madisonville, Sturgis and other neighboring associations will be invited to participate. It is believed that a great meet will be the result and such an interest may be aroused around here as college towns show in such sports. Previous to the inter-association there will be a preliminary meet in the local association.

DIES FROM 40-DAY FAST.

Woman Believed It Would Cure Her of Cancer.

Chicago, June 23.—Mrs. Louisa Thompson, 40 years of age, a resident of Zion City, the north shore town, founded by the late John Alexander Dowse, died from starvation after a 40-day fast. She is said to have undertaken the ordeal in the belief that it would cure her of cancer, with which she was afflicted. She and her husband were members of one of the numerous cults that exist in Zion City.

ASQUITH'S PREDICTION.

Striking One Made by England's New Premier That Has Come True.

Herbert Henry Asquith, who succeeded the late Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman as prime minister of England, has been in turn a member of parliament, a privy counselor, secretary of the state home department, ecclesiastical commissioner, chancellor of the exchequer and, lastly, premier. He is one of the most cultured men in the cabinet, for from his earliest days he has been an enthusiastic student. In his school days his one dream was to rise to political power. He cared for no sport. His chief recreation was reading verbatim parliamentary reports in the newspapers. Apropos of this it is told how he used to borrow a copy of the London Times every morning from a friendly news agent and go out and read it, sitting under the hedge of the cricket field, while his schoolfellows were enjoying games. As a barrister he was successful which attends only a very small proportion of those who go in for the law, but it has been the outcome of much striving, for at first he met with reverses on every hand. He has said that it was the greatest day of his life when he got into parliament. His enthusiasm on that occasion was marked that when parliament opened he told a fellow member that one day he would be prime minister and was laughed at for his pains.

A strong man Mr. Asquith is in a class by himself. He combines with the fearlessness and pugnacity of Roosevelt the tactfulness and cynicism of Clontarf, the wide intellectual range of the late John Hay and the debating ability of Bryan. No man in British public life can stand against him in a forensic battle. He is a lawyer by training, the greatest lawyer in England, and he is as merciless in the house of commons as if he were conducting a cross examination.

"A UN-AMERICAN ACT."

View of Mrs. Donald McLean on Gift of Chesapeake Club to England.

The news that William Waldorf Astor had given the Chesapeake flag to England created great excitement in the ranks of the Daughters of the American Revolution while in convention in Washington.

From the president general, Mrs. Donald McLean, to the last alternate all expressed regret that an American should so far forget all ideas of propriety as to give away his country's battleflag. Mrs. McLean left a dinner party when she heard the news and issued the following statement: "It is incredible, if it is true, which I am inclined to doubt, for it is the most un-American thing I ever heard of. Next to the Revolutionary struggle the war of 1812 certainly awakens the pride of every American. Its relics should be preserved, especially from the English, for any American who has ever heard those immortal words, 'Don't give up the ship,' could certainly never think of giving up the flag. It is a battle flag. I am inclined to doubt the correctness of the cablegram."

TO BURN HISTORIC HOME.

So Infested With Bats It Isn't Fit For People to Live In.

Montville, the colonial home of Patrick Henry, near Richmond, one of the historic places of Virginia, is to be burned to the ground by its owners, the great-grandchildren of the famous Virginian, because the place has become overgrown with bats.

Since warm weather began there is no living in or near the place. Bats by thousands hang about the grand parlors and spacious bedrooms of the mansion.

Attempts to exterminate them by poison and with clubs have failed. They are in every room. They hang in strings from the furniture, the ceiling, from the walls, and they are in such numbers that they form curtains before windows, darkening the house. The house has become uninhabitable.

A Curious Souvenir.

A short time ago Post Office X gave an audience to a group of distinguished Americans. While they were conversing the reverend gentleman took from a compartment in a nearby desk a piece of paper and, handing it to one of the party, said, "By the way, allow me to present you with a little souvenir of your visit to this X. The recipient, upon examining the treasure, found it to be the return coupon of a railroad ticket from Venice to Rome, says the May Bohemian. It was the one purchased by Cardinal Giuseppe Sarto to attend the meeting of cardinals at Rome after the death of Leo. As we all know, he has never returned to Venice."

Statuses Made of Potatoes.

Yee Hip is the most artistic Chinaman in Philadelphia's Chinatown. By an arrangement of wire and the artistic use of his penknife Hip can make all kinds of statues out of potatoes. Faye at the Bath, Venus de Milo and heads of great men are among his creations in this line. He colors them with India ink, and his handwork is in great demand in the stores of the Tenderloin. Hip is now working on an artistic group which he will call "Washington Crossing the Delaware." He will use about a peck of potatoes in completing this creation.

None of the names were made public. Many are said to be prominent farmers.

Soldiers are taking extra precaution in guarding Sanford Hall, Mrs. Minnie Dean and Henry Bennett, who are said to be divulging names to the grand jury.

INTERNATIONAL

Sunday School Convention at Louisville Has Adjourned.

The great International Sunday School Convention, which has been in session at Louisville this week has adjourned.

A new era has dawned in the Protestant Sunday school world of North America, says the Louisville Courier-Journal.

With their minds fully made up to accept the report of the Lesson committee, framed at the now famous "Boston conference," the first of this year, the 1,400 delegates to the International Sunday School Association made history at the assembly. With the adoption of the optional graded Sunday school spiritual educational plan, a step was taken that can only find a counterpart in Sunday school annals in the introduction of temperance into the lessons in 1890. The action marked the culmination of a friendly fight of twelve years' duration. For a dozen years, and at four conventions, the graded system of lessons has come up for consideration, and has been voted down. The compromise which makes the use of the graded system of Sunday school lessons optional, leaving those favoring the general lesson free to continue its promulgation, settled the difference of opinion once and for all. There was not a single delegate who withheld his vote, fearing that the graded lessons in the international field would tend to break up the unity of the whole.

That said work shall be done within sixty days from the date of publication of this ordinance, and shall be done under the supervision of the City Engineer, and shall be of the grade and standard of work as in such cases provided by ordinance. All said work shall be done at the expense of the owners of said abutting lots or lands.

THE HALL OF FAME.

Andrew Carnegie's library gifts amount almost to $50,000,000.

Reginald Vandeblit at college, it is said, wrote a number of poems of more than average merit.

Thomas Foley, eighty-six, of Claremont, N. H., acknowledges that he made a mistake in never marrying.

Secretary Taft will deliver the Memorial day oration at Grant's tomb, on the Hudson river, New York. The president may attend.

Senator Julius C. Burrows of Michigan was born in Pennsylvania, served with a Pennsylvania regiment during the civil war and received his academic and law education in Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Olive Wentworth, who is eighty-five years old, is one of the smartest old ladies in Woodman, N. H. She does all of her housework, sewing and knitting, besides caring for a large flock of hens.

One of the few survivors of the Mexican war residing in Connecticut is Ira Chapman, eighty, of Winsted. Mr. Chapman's grandfather, Robert Chapman, was a Revolutionary soldier and attained the age of ninety-six.

James Dorr of Worcester, Mass., seventy-three years of age, dropped into a bowling alley the other day and after stating that it was the first time he had bowled in thirty-five years made an average of seventy-eight pins in eight strings.

The sum of $150,000 was left to Henry Drexel in England by his father if he would return to the Plymouth Brethren, but as he had allied himself with a fraternity vowed to the simple life he refused to accept the bequest.

Angus Morrison of Chicago suffered the poverty of riches when he visited St. Louis recently with $5,000 in cash in his pockets, and yet because of a soiled shirt and dusty coat he was unable to obtain lodging. He was finally locked up for safekeeping.

His majesty King Victor Emmanuel of Italy has conferred upon Harry St. George Tucker the degree of commander of the Order of the Crown of Italy in recognition of the high regard in which the latter is held by Italian officials who were received by him while he was president of the Jamestown exposition.

New York City.

All of the immigrants who come to New York are not passengers. The cabins brought 148,100 last year.

New Yorkers are now moving faster in the direction of owning their own homes than ever before. Installment buyers are paying on contracts calling for $250,000,000.

Experience in the metropolis prompted a coal dealer to say of one of his customers, "I don't think that he is a very wealthy man, because he pays his bills as soon as I present them."

Chief Derry of the New York bureau of weights and measures reports that 5 per cent of the sellers in the city use false balances and measures and that to sell coal one-quarter short of the weight paid for is quite common.—New York Herald.

Home Notes.

In cleaning ribbons it is better not to tear them at all. Sponge with gasoline or ether and wrap around a large bottle.

Never fill a lamp completely. If it is filled in a cold room and then taken to a warm one expansion will occur and the oil will overflow on the sides.

Finger marks disappear from varnished furniture when sweet oil is rubbed on the spot and from oiled wood when paraffin is used in the same way.

When a candle is too small for the socket of the candlestick and there is no time to make a paper filler, light the candle and drop some of the melted grease into the socket, then quickly stick the candle in, and it will remain firm as soon as the grease hardens.

The Gamy Trout.

It spawns on the reefs. It is found on both continents. It is now artificially propagated. It belongs to the same genus as does the salmon.

When transported to warm waters it becomes fat and lazy. Mr. Fisherman likes it because of its very sporty proclivities.

It is at its splendid best in cool, sparkling mountain streams. There are many varieties in both western and eastern waters.

It is omnivorous. Everything from jackknives to cornucopias has been found in its stomach.—Philadelphia Record.

Current Comment.

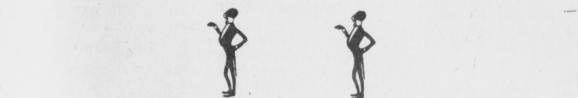

The only way to tame that fellow Castro would be to import, naturalize and assimilate him and then elect him to congress.—Philadelphia Ledger.

For a fleet that was said to be full of blowholes and other infirmities the American battleships are giving a pretty fair imitation of seaworthiness.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

TO AID FARMERS

Uncle Sam to Act as Employment Agent Through Postmasters.

Through the Department of Commerce and Labor and the Post-office Department, Secretary Strauss and Postmaster General Meyer have inaugurated a plan of service which it is hoped will relieve farmers and others in this country from embarrassment in getting help. The details are being worked out by T. V.
Powderly and Assistant Postmaster
General De Graw. The plan contemplates a general distribution of admitted aliens and other persons seeking employment. There are being forwarded to postmasters throughout the United States packages of cards, with return attachments for distribution to farmers and others who are likely to need the services of farm or other laborers or mechanics, and who may obtain the character of help required by mailing the return information card, properly filled out, without payment of postage.

For this service, no charge is to be made or fee accepted either from employer or employee. In case where labor is not needed at this particular time the applications may be retained by prospective employers for future use. The work of selecting suitable laborers will be given especial attention by experts.

HENRY BACON.

Must Cough Up $30,000 Excess Charges On Printing.

Frankfort, Ky., June 26.—Henry Bacon, former public printing contractor, is hit hard by the court of appeals. Bacon charged the State $30,000 for a job of work, but the commission allowed him but $20,000 on his claim and referred the bill to the Attorney General, who approved it all but one item, involving $950.

The opinion of the court of appeals, which was written by Judge Lanning, says Bacon was only entitled to $4,000 for the books, and gives judgment against him, in favor of the State, for $23,992.99, with interest from August, 1902. This really makes the amount of the judgment over $32,000, as the interest for six years is over $8,000.

The court releases Bacon's bondsmen, George and John A. Fulton, from liability.

DEMOCRATIC PLANS.

Urey Woodson Is Good For Another Term as National Committeeman.

According to the present plans the delegates from Kentucky to the Democratic National Convention, to be held at Denver, on July 7, will meet in Denver on Monday, July 6, and re-elect Urey Woodson National Committeeman and Ollie James
Chairman of the delegation.

STATE COMMITTEE TO ORGANIZE
The new Democratic State Committee will not be organized until after the Denver Convention is held.
It is understood that under the new regime the meetings of the State committees will be held in Louisville and in Lexington. At the first meeting, the new committeemen will formally elect Henry R. Previtt chairman and George Spear, of Lawrenceburg, who is a candidate for secretary, claims to have enough votes to win. Many Democrats are urging that the new committee establish permanent headquarters in Louisville just as the Republicans have done. It is said that this will be one of the first questions that the new chairman, Mr. Previtt, will present to the committees. At the first meeting of the committees it is not improbable that a campaign committee will be named to take charge of the fight for Bryan in the State.

His Birth,

Work in Journalism

By ROBERTUS LOVE.

"He has spoken face to face before all question to more hearers than has any other man in the world's history," says one who traveled with William Jennings Bryan during the presidential campaigns of 1896 and 1900, and there is no doubt as to the truth of the statement.

The purpose of this article is briefly to sketch the life of Mr. Bryan up to the age of thirty-six, when he was nominated by the Democratic party for the presidency of the United States. It is a life possible only to American politics, and, whether or not Mr. Bryan shall reach the presidency, it is an interesting chapter in United States political history.

The town of Salem, Ill., is the birthplace of Bryan. Judge Silas L. Bryan, a substantial, intellectual settler from Virginia, was his father. Maria Elizabeth Jennings was his mother's maiden name. The child was born March 19, 1859. Judge Bryan lived on a farm near the edge of town. He had nine children, of whom William Jennings is the fourth. The boy grew up outdoors, drinking the daily medicine of sunshine and the open air. His physical constitution, a marvel of robustness and energy, came by inheritance the party leaders offered him the nomination for the lieutenant governorship of Nebraska. He declined the offer, but made a stumping campaign for the ticket throughout the state.

The next year, 1880, the young Democracy thrust upon the young Democratic congressman from the First district, J. Sterling Morton, who 15 his time was father of Arbor day and a member of President Cleveland's cabinet, had been defeated in the race for congress from that district in 1888 by a Republican majority of more than 3,000 votes. Scarcely anybody expected young Bryan to win. He was not so very sanguine himself, but he made a brilliant campaign and defeated Congressman Morton by nearly 7,000 votes. In Omaha, where Connell lived, Bryan was met at "that Lincoln boy." It was the reaction against the new McKinley tariff that elected Bryan—and the silver tongue of the Lincolnian lad.

So at thirty Bryan was chosen to the national house of representatives. He delivered his first speech in the house the 12th of March, 1892, on the subject of free wool. Senator Burrows of Michigan temporarily chairman of this year's Republican national convention, declared that it was the best speech on the tariff he ever had heard. Newseditorship after a fierce legal fight against the advertising contract. He was nominated to the senate by the unanimous vote of the state convention, despite the fact that many of them disagreed with him on the silver coinage issue. With John M. Thurston, the leading Republican candidate for the senate, Bryan engaged in two joint debates, having challenged Thurston. The forensic duels took place in Lincoln and Omaha. The latter was the sole topic of discussion. Bryan defended the Wilson tariff, which as a member of the ways and means committee he had helped to create. At Lincoln the enthusiasm was such that Bryan was carried from the platform outside and down into the street, where howling mobs of "overhills" admirers awaited him. Thurston was elected by the legislature. Mr. Bryan remained a private citizen. He had challenged William McKinley also to a joint debate on the tariff, but the Ohio tariff builder declined. Mr. McKinley was destined to meet the Nebraska in a broader contest a little later.

In the meantime Mr. Bryan was happy at home with his little family, the helpful wife and three children. The children now are grown up. In Mrs. William H. Leavitt and has made her father a grandfather. William junior is eighteen, and Miss Grace is a budding belle of seventeen years.

Young Mrs. Leavitt herself is something of a politician. She has been elected a delegate to the Democratic state convention in Colorado, her home being in Denver. Young William is a student in the Nebraska State university at Lincoln. Miss Grace, who in the event of her father's election to the presidency will become "the young lady of the White House," is at home with her estimable mother on the Bryan farm near Lincoln, known as "Fairview," where the head of the family some years ago built a handsome residence. Prior to that the family had occupied a modest cottage in Lincoln, where Mr. Bryan returned to his law practice after his unsuccessful campaign for the senatorship.

When in 1896 the Republican convention which nominated McKinley for president met in St. Louis, William J. Bryan held no office whatever. He still had a connection with the Omaha paper, and he went to St. Louis as a press correspondent. At the Planters hotel the clerk looked over the plainly garbed young man who signed "W. J. Bryan" on the register and made him pay in advance. The clerk put Bryan in a room with seven Republicans. Under date of June 10 a correspondent of the New York Tribune sent to his paper from St. Louis this highly interesting paragraph:

Ex-Congressman William J. Bryan, the leader of the free silver wing of the Nebraska Democracy, was one of yesterday's arrivals. The speaker of the Nebraska in a hotel corridor in consultation with several Republicans from free silver states of the far west excited much comment. In response to a question concerning his mission Mr. Bryan replied: "I have nothing to say now except that these gentlemen will be here next November voting the same ticket."

Senator Henry M. Teller of Colorado and others were the free silver Republicans under indictment by the Tribune. R. A. Rogers, Gen. Mgr.

prediction by Mr. Bryan that they would be voting the same ticket with him in November, for they walked out of the Republican national convention when the gold standard platform was adopted and aligned themselves with the free silver Democracy.

But neither the New York correspondent nor the free silver seceders nor the Nebraska correspondent and free silver leader himself could foretell that the seceders would vote for William Jennings Bryan as the presidential candidate on the ticket which was to be nominated at Chicago a few weeks later.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN, FROM HIS LATEST PHOTOGRAPH.

and was nurtured by wholesome and healthful environment in boyhood. Bryan attended the public schools in Salem until he was fifteen, when he entered Whipple academy at Jacksonville, Ill. Two years later he matriculated in Illinois college, in the same city, from which institution he was graduated with honors at the age of twenty-one. During his college course his oratorical abilities made him prominent in middle western collegiate life. He won the honor of orator of the year in the state contest of college orators. He won that contest and represented Illinois in 1881 at the Interstate oratorical contest, held in Chicago, Ill., where he achieved second honors. He was class orator at graduation.

Jacksonville has a female seminary. In that school Miss Mary E. Baird was a student, while young Bryan was in Illinois college. She was from Perry, Ill., and was of excellent family and an ambitious student. A bright young man and a bright young woman attending college in the same town sometimes emphasize the aphorism that like attracts like. Perhaps that explains why Bryan, after attending the Union college in Chicago and reading law at the same time in the office of Judge Lyman Trumbull, the celebrated associate of Abraham Lincoln, returned to Jacksonville to begin the practice of his profession. Bryan and Miss Baird were married shortly after his return. Mrs. Bryan studied law in order to assist her husband in his professional work. After the Bryans removed to Lincoln, Neb., in 1887 Mrs. Bryan was admitted to the bar. Bryan became junior partner in the law firm of Taibot & Bryan. He believed there was more opportunity for a rising young lawyer in a new state—a belief assuredly well grounded in his own case.

Bryan plunged into politics in the spring of 1888, and that became his life vocation instead of the law. He was elected a delegate to the Democratic state convention at Omaha, where he made a speech strongly advocating free trade; also he made a reputation as a speaker. He was only twenty-eight years old, yet the very next year

Sophy of Kravonia.

Hopkinsville.

In vain will the readers of this tale of romantic love and brilliant daring search the maps of the world for the picturesque land of Kravonia, wherein lovely, fascinating Sophy and her mysterious Red Star played their parts. This much we may tell him before he embarks on his voyage to Kravonia. But we may assure him that when he reluctantly parts with Sophy, some-time scullery maid of Moringham, Essex, England, later spiritualistic medium of Paris, France, and still later of high rank in Slavna and Volseni, in Kravonia, the country of her adoption will be to him, like Zenda and Grausark, more real than are many of the smaller, actual kingdoms of the earth. Sad and tragic in some of its aspects is the story of Sophy of Kravonia, but its pathos is so lightened by devoted loyalty, hardy bravery and tender, self-sacrificing affection that at the end the reader will surely feel its telling has not been unworthy of the master hand of its famous chronicler.

He expressed exactly the view of the two great neighbors, though by no means in the language which their official communications adopted.

Stenovich knew their views very well. He had also received a pretty plain intimation from Stafnitz that the colonel considered the averting of the guns to Slavna as a purely military task, appertaining not to the ministry of state, but to the officer commanding the garrison in the capital. Stafnitz was that officer, and he proposed himself to go to Koskol. Suleiman's tower, he added, would be left in the trustworthy hands of Captain Elsbach. Again Stenovich fully understood. Indeed, the colonel was almost brutally candid. His letter was nothing less than plain word that power lay with the sword and that the sword was in his own hand. Stenovich had got rid of King Sergius only to fall under the rule of Dictator Stafnitz. Was that to be the end of it?

Stenovich preferred any other issue. The ideal thing was his own rule in the name of young Alexis, with such diplomatic honing and humoring of Countess Ellenburg as might prove necessary. That was plainly impossible so long as Stafnitz was master of the army. It would become finally hopeless if Stenoch held Suleiman's tower till Stafnitz brought the guns to Slavna. What, then, was Stenovich's alternative? For he was not yet brought to giving up the game as totally lost. His name stood high, though his real power tottered on a most insecure foundation. He could get good terms for his assistance. There was time to make a friends with the man-mountain of unrighteousness.

Privately, as became invalids, without the knowledge of any one outside their confidential entourage, the representatives of the two great neighbors received General Stenovich. They are believed to have convinced him that in the event of any further disorders in Kravonia intervention could not be avoided. Troops were on either frontier, ready for such an emergency. A joint occupation would be forced on the allies. With a great deal of sorrow no doubt the general felt himself driven to accept this conclusion.

Many ills come from impure blood. Can't have pure blood with faulty digestion, lazy liver and sluggish bowels. Burdock Blood-Bitters strengthens the stomach, bowels and liver, and purifies the blood.

Michigan Girl Does Not Lose a Day From School.

Benton Harbor, Mich., June 23.—Miss Zora Inman, of this city, has just completed a continuous attendance at school of fourteen years without being absent or tardy. At the commencement exercises this year the board of education presented her with a silver medal in recognition of her attainments.

After a heavy meal, take a couple of Doan's Regulets, and give your stomach, liver and bowels the help they will need. Regulets bring easy, regular passage of the bowels.

Given Ten Years.

Benton, Ky., June 23.—Lon Holly was found guilty of manslaughter

He at once requested Stafnitz to fetch the guns to Slavna. He left the colonel full discretion in the matter. His only desire was to insure the tranquility of the capital and to show Volseni how hopeless it was to maintain the fanciful and absurd claims of Baroness Dobrava. The representatives, it must be supposed, approved this attitude and wished the general all success. At a later date his efforts to secure order and to avoid the inevitable but regrettable loss of a few disturbances were handsomely acknowledged by both powers. General Stenovich had not Stafnitz's nerve and dash. But he was a man of considerable resource.

A man of good feeling, too, to judge from another step he took—whether with the concurrence of the representatives or entirely of his own motion has never become known. He waited till Colonel Stafnitz, who returned a civil and almost effusive reply to his communication, had set off to fetch the guns, which, as has been seen, had been unloaded from the railway and at Koskol, three days' journey up the Krath; then he entered into communication with Volseni. He sent Volseni a private and friendly warning. What was the use of Volseni holding out when the big guns were coming? It could mean only hopeless resistance, more disorder, more bloodshed. Let Volseni and the lady whose claims he supported consider that he warned in time and acknowledge King Alexis.

This letter he addressed to Zerkovitch. There were insuperable diplomatic difficulties in the way of addressing it to Sophy directly. "Madam I may not call you, and mistress I am loath to call you," said Queen Elizabeth to the archbishop's wife. It was just a case of that sort of difficulty. He could not call her queen of Kravonia, and she would be offended if he called her Baroness Dobrava. So the letter went to Zerkovitch, and it went by the hand of one of Zerkovitch's friends, so anxious was the general to be as friendly and conciliatory as circumstances permitted.

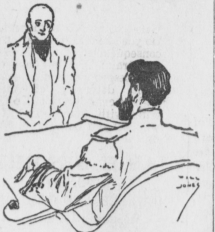

Much to his surprise, considerably to his alarm, Lepage was sent for to the general's private residence on the evening of the day on which Colonel Stafnitz sent out for Koskol to fetch the guns.

Stenovich greeted him cordially, smoothed away his apprehension, acquainted him with the nature of his mission and with the gist of the letter which he was to carry. Stenovich seemed more pleased to enlighten than for some time back, possibly because he had got Stafnitz quietly out of Slavna.

"Beg M. Zerkovitch to give the letter to Baroness Dobrava," he called her that to Lepage as soon as possible and to urge her to listen to it. Add that we shall be ready to treat her with every consideration—any title in reason and any provision in reason too. It's all in my letter, but repeat it on my behalf, Lepage."

"I shouldn't think she'd take either title or money, general," said Lepage bluntly.

"You think she's disinterested? No doubt, no doubt! She'll be the more ready to see the uselessness of prolonging her present attitude. He grew almost vehement as he laid his hand on a large map which was spread out Lepage looked at the minister thoughtfully, on the table in front of him. "Look here, Lepage. This is Monday, by Wednesday evening Colonel Stafnitz will be at Koskol—here!" He put his finger by the spot. "On Thursday morning he'll start back. The barges travel well, and—yes—I think he'll have his guns here by Sunday, less than a week from now. Yes, on Thursday night he ought to reach Evka, on Friday Harsha, on Saturday the lock at Miklevni. Yes, on Saturday the lock at Miklevni! That would bring him here on Sunday. Yes, the lock at Miklevni on Saturday, I think." He looked up at Lepage almost imploringly. "If she hesitates, show her that. They're bound to be here in less than a week."

Lepage cocked his head on one side and looked at the minister thoughtfully. It all sounded very convincing. Colonel Stafnitz would be at the lock at Miklevni on Saturday and on Sunday with the guns at Slavna. And of course, arduous though the transport would be, they could be before Volseni in two or three days more. It was really no use resisting.

Stenovich passed a purse over to Lepage. "For your necessary expenses," he said. Lepage took up the purse, which felt well filled, and pocketed it. "The baroness may not fully appreciate what I've been saying," added Stenovich. "But Lepage knows every inch of the river. He'll make it quite plain if she asks him about it. And present her with my sincere respects and sympathy—my sympathy with her as a private person, of course. You mustn't commit me in any way, Lepage."

"I think," said Lepage, "that you're capable of looking after that department yourself, general. But aren't you making the colonel go a little too fast?"

"But he has a large force to move, I suppose."

"Oh, dear, no! A large force? No, no! Only a company, just about a hundred strong, Lepage." He rose. "Just about a hundred."

"Ah, then he might keep time!" Lepage agreed, still very thoughtfully. "You'll start at once?" the general asked.

"Within an hour."

"That's right. We must run no unnecessary risks. Delays might mean new troubles."

He held out his hand and shook Lepage's warmly. "You must believe that I respect and share your grief at the king's death."

"Which king, general?"

"Oh, oh! King Alexis, of course! We must listen to the voice of the nation. Our new king lives and reigns. The voice of the nation, Lepage?"

"Ah," said Lepage dryly. "I'd be suspecting some ventriloquist!"

General Stenovich honored the ally with a broad smile. He thought the representatives with cold would be amused if he repeated it. The put on the shoulder which he gave Lepage was a congratulation. "The animal is so very inarticulate of itself," he said.

Chapter Thirty

THOUGH not remote in distance, yet Volenski was apart and isolated from that which was happening. Not only was nothing known of the two great neighbors—nothing reached him in Volenski of the state of affairs in Slavna itself. They did not know that the thieves were quarreling about the plunder nor that the diplomats had taken hold. They knew only that young Alexis reigned in Slavna by reason of their king's murder and against the will of him who was dead; only that they had chosen Sophia for their queen because she had been the dead king's wife and his chosen successor.

All the men who could be spared from labor came into the city. They collected what few horses they could. They filled their little fortresses with provisions. They could not go to Slavna, but they awaited with confidence the day when Alexis should dare to move against them into the hills. Slavna had never been able to beat them in their own hills yet. The bolder spirits even implored Lukovitch to lead them down in a raid on the plains.

Lukovitch would sanction no more than a scouting party to see whether any movement was in progress from the other side. Peter Yasski rode down with his men to within a few miles of Slavna. For result of the expedition he brought back the news of the guns. The great guns, the guns which had reached Kravonia and were to be in Slavna in a week.

The rank and file hardly understood what that meant. Anger at their destined and daring guns should fall to hostile hands was the feeling predominant. But the tidings struck their leaders home to the heart. Lukovitch knew what it meant. The plan, which had served three years in the army at home, knew very well. Covered by such a force as Stanzitz could bring up, the guns could be moved to pieces, and Volenski could strike back not a single blow.

"And it's all through her that the guns are here at all," said Zerkovitch, with a sigh for the irony of it.

Dunstanbury laid his hand on Lukovitch's shoulder. "It's no use," he said. "We must tell her so, we must make the men understand. She can't let them have their homes battered to pieces—the town with the women and children in it—and all for nothing!"

"We can't desert her," Lukovitch protested.

"No. We must get her safely away and then submit."

Since Dunstanbury had offered his services to Sophia he had assumed a leading part. His military training and his knowledge of the world gave him an influence over the rude, simple men. Lukovitch looked to him for guidance. He had much to say in the primitive preparations for defense. But now he declared defense to be impossible.

"Who'll tell her so?" asked Basil Williamson.

"We must get her across the frontier," said Dunstanbury. "There-by St. Peter's pass—the way we pass—Basil. It's an easy journey, and I don't suppose they'll try to intercept us. You can send twenty or thirty well-mounted men with us, can't you, Lukovitch?"

A small party well mounted was what we shall want."

Lukovitch waved his hands sadly. "With the guns against us it would be a massacre. You say, my lord, his heart was very heavy. After generations of defiance Volenski must bow to Slavna and his dead lord's will go for nothing. All this was the doing of the great guns."

Dunstanbury's argument was sound, but he argued from his heart as well as his head. He was convinced that the best service he could render to Sophia was to get her safely out of the country. His heart urged that her safety was the one and only thing to consider. As he went to and fro among them now, pale and silent, yet always accessible, always ready to listen, to consider and to answer, she moved him with a new and growing attraction. Her life was as though dead or frozen. It seemed to him as though all Kravonia must be to her the tomb of the living grave in the little hillside church of Volenski she visited so often. An ardent and overpowering desire rose in him to rescue her, to drag her forth from these dim cold shades into the sunlight of life again. Then the spell of this frozen grief might be broken; then the dead drooping cities revive and bloom again. Kravonia and who ruled there—aye, in his heart even the fate of the gallant little city which harbored them and whose interest he needed—were nothing to him beside Sophia. On her his thoughts were centered.

Sophy's own mind in these days can be gathered only from what others say. She made no record of it. Fallen in an hour from heights of love and hope and exaltation, she lay stunned in the abyss. In intellect calm and collected, she seemed to have been as one numbed in feeling, too maimed for pain, suffering as though from a mortification of the heart. The simple men and women of Volenski looked on her with awe and chattered fearfully of the red star; how that its wearer had been predestined to high enterprise, but foredoomed to thirty reverses of fortune. Amid all their pity for her they spoke of the evil eye. Some whispered that she could bring ruin on herself. Had it not been the man who loved her lost both crown and life?

And it was she through whom the guns had come. The meaning of the guns had spread now to every hearth. What had once been hailed as an achievement second only to her exploit in the Street of the Fountain seemed to her point more finely the sharpened spears of desperation.

The men held by their wives were grumbling at them in their homes. Was she not after all a stranger? Must Volenski lie in the dust for her sake, for the sake of her who were that ominous, inexplicable star?

Dunstanbury knew all this. Lukovitch hardly sought to deny it, though he was full of scorn for it, and Marie Zerkovitch had by heart the tales of many wise old beldams who had prophesied this and that from the first moment they saw the red star. Surely not and slowly the enthusiasm which had crowned Sophy was turning into a fear which made the people shrink from even while they loved her, even while they did not cease to love. The head of Heaven was against her and against those who were near her, and against the women. The men still feigned not to hear. Had they not taken Heaven to witness that they would serve her and avenge the king? Alas, their simple vow was too primitive for days like these—too primitive for the days of the great guns which lay on the bosom of the Krath.

Dunstanbury had an interview with Sophy early on Tuesday morning, the day after Stanzitz had started for Kozakol. He put his case with the bluntness and honesty native to him. In his devotion to her safety he did not spare her the truth. She listened with the smile devoid of happiness which her face now wore so often.

"I know it all," she said. "They begin to look differently to me as I walk through the street—when I go to the church. If I stay here long enough, they'll all call me a witch. But didn't they swear? And I haven't a sworn? Are we to do nothing for Volenski's memory?"

"What can we do against the guns? The men can die and the walls be tumbled down. And there are the women and children!"

"Yes, I suppose we can do nothing. But it goes to my heart that they should leave Volenski's guns."

"Your guns?" Dunstanbury reminded her, with a smile of whimsical sympathy.

"That's what they say in the city, too?" she asked.

"The old hags, who are clever at the weather and other mysteries. And of course Mme. Zerkovitch."

Sophy's smile broadened a little. "Of course poor little Marie Zerkovitch!" she exclaimed. "She's been sure I'm a witch ever since she's known me."

"I want you to come over the frontier with me and Basil Williamson. I've some influence, and I can insure your getting through all right."

"Whatever you like. I shall be utterly at your orders."

She leaned her head against the high back which she sat, a child and old, black as her hair. She fixed her profound eyes on him.

"I wish I could stay here—in the little church—with monseigneur," she said.

"By heavens, no!" he cried, startled into sudden and untimely vehemence.

"All my life is there," she went on, paying no heed to his outburst.

"Give me another chance. You're very young."

"You can't count life by years any more than hours by minutes. You reckon the journey out by the clock, but by the stages you have passed. Once before I loved a man, and he was killed in battle. But that was different. I was very hurt but I wasn't maimed. I'm maimed now by the death of monseigneur."

"You can bring ruin on these folk, and you can't give yourself up. So leave! He could not trust himself to speak more of her feelings nor of the future. He came back to the present needs of the case.

"It's true—did you not swear?" She leaned forward to him. "And you aren't you afraid of the red star?"

"We Essex men aren't afraid. We haven't enough imagination," he answered, smiling again.

She threw herself back, crying low. "Ah, if we could strike one blow—just one for the bath we swore and for monseigneur! Then perhaps I should be content."

"To go with me?"

"It is tempting it, but I should think best didn't come to me."

"You must run no danger anyhow!" he cried hastily and eagerly.

"My friend," she said gently, "for such as I am today there's no such thing as danger. Don't think I value my position here or the title they've given me, poor me! I have loved titles—for a moment she smiled—"and I should have loved this one if monseigneur had lived. I should have been proud as a child of it. If I could have loved it by his side for even a few weeks, a few days! But now it's barren and bitter—bitter and barren to me."

He followed the thoughts at which her words blighted. They seemed to him infinitely piteous.

"Now, as things have fallen out, what am I in this country? A wife and am I? I belong to nobody and nobody to me."

"Then come away!" he burst out again.

Her deep eyes were set on his face once more. "Yes, that's the conclusion," she said very mournfully. "We Essex people are sensible, aren't we? And we have no illusion. Did you laugh when you saw me proclaimed and heard us swear?"

"Good heavens, no!"

"Then think how my oath and my love call me to strike one blow for monseigneur!" She hid her eyes behind her hand for a moment. "Aren't there fifty—thirty—twenty, who would care their lives well risked? For what are men's lives given them?"

"There's one at least, if you will have it so," Dunstanbury answered.

"There was a knock on the door, and without waiting for a bidding Zerkovitch came quickly in. Lukovitch was behind and with him Lepage. Ten minutes before the vial had ridden up to the city gates, waving his handkerchief above his head.

Sophy gave a cry of pleasure at seeing him. "A brave man, who loved his king and served monseigneur!" she said as she darted forward and clasped his hand.

Zerkovitch was as excited and hurried as ever. He thrust out his hand, "From Stenovich, madame, for you to read," he said.

She took it, saying to Lepage with a touch of reproach, "Are you General Stenovich's messenger now, M. Lepage?"

"Read it, madame," said he. [TO BE CONTINUED.]

A WOMAN'S BACK

The Aches and Pains Will Disappear if the Advice of This Citizen is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains.

Most times "it's the kidneys' fault. Backache is really kidney ache. That's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it.

Many Hopkinston Women know this. Read what one has to say about it.

Mrs. John Coombs, 1226 South Virginia street, Hopkinston, Ky., says: "For a great many years I suffered from a persistent aching across my loins and through the kidneys. At times my back was so bad I could hardly turn in bed; I could not lie on my back without putting my hand under it, for in this way, it seemed to relieve the pain. A friend of Mr. Coombs told him about Doan's Kidney Pills and he got a box for me at L. A. Johnson & Co.'s drug store. On using them, I steadily improved until the dreadful aching was relieved and I could attend to my household duties without inconvenience. Doan's Kidney Pills did more for me than any other medicine I ever used, and I heartily recommend them."

The mother says: "No, my dear, I told you that I should not kiss you, and must keep my word."

"But, mamma, mamma," says the little girl, "would it be breaking your word if you should kiss me just once tonight when I'm asleep?"

OLD TIME BONDS

Dr. E. S. Stuart Finds City Bonds Issued In the Year 1870.

Long Since Matured and Their Existence a Surprise to the Owner Himself.

While looking through a bundle of old papers in his safety box at the Bank of Hopkinsville Thursday, Dr. E. S. Stuart, of Fairview, found six $100 bonds of the city of Hopkinsville, past due eighteen years, with 25 interest coupons attached. The bonds show a face value of $187.50 each, or an aggregate of $1,125 Oct. 1, 1890. They were issued for 20 years. They were signed by E. H. Hopper, chairman, and Jno. C. Latham, clerk, both long since dead.

All of the issue that could be found were paid when they matured in 1890, and as no financial exhibit was shown in those days, the bonds were not known to be in existence. They were part of a small issue and no one connected with city affairs now has any recollection of the way in which the bonds became lost sight of. It is probable that they were called in and never presented for payment.

THOS. TAGGART STARTS BOOM

For Kern, and Says Indiana
Man Will Get Second Place.

FEW CONTESTS FILED.

Greatly Pleased With the Arrangements at Denver.

Denver, Colorado, June 26.—Thos. Taggart, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, came to town to-day, bringing along a vice presidential boom which he put forth with much enthusiasm.

"Bryan will be nominated on the first ballot, without a doubt, and his running mate will be John W. Kern, of Indiana. Mr. Kern will be placed in nomination by John E. Lamb or B. F. Shively, both of that state, and his nomination ought to follow."

This was the greeting Mr. Taggart gave to newspaper men. A little later, when he had been whizzed to the Auditorium—the convention hall—he exhibited little less enthusiasm.

"This arrangement for the convention is fine," he said. "I cannot see how it could be improved upon. The Auditorium is a wonderful piece of architecture, and everything seems to be in tip-top shape."

Chairman Taggart has called a meeting of the National Committee for Saturday, July 4, when the principal business will be to hear and determine the contests for seats as delegates which have been filed. These are comparatively few in number.

NEW FEATURE

To be Added to the Tobacco Association.

Paducah, Ky., June 26.—While in the city General Manager Felix G. Ewing, of the Tobacco Association, stated that the association controlled 55,000 hogheads of tobacco, 22,000 of which had been sold up to June 20. The tobacco sold was composed principally of lugs and low grade leaf, which brought more money than the entire 55,000 hogheads would have brought five years ago.

The board of directors is considering a new feature to the association, which promises to increase the membership. No intimation was given as to what this feature would be.

Attention K. of P.

You are earnestly requested to meet Sunday morning, June 28th, at 10:15 o'clock, sharp, at the Castle Hall of Evergreen Lodge No. 38, Knights of Pythias.
